II. Council Procedures ........................................................................ Dr. Craig A. Jordan

Procedural Matters

Dr. Jordan discussed important procedural matters, including requirements imposed by the Government in the Sunshine Act and the Federal Advisory Committee Act. The necessity of members to avoid conflict of appearance thereof was stressed, as was the need to maintain confidentiality concerning the proceedings and materials related to the closed portion of the meeting. Dr. Jordan announced that the Council meeting would be closed for consideration of grant applications during the morning session, but would be open to the public at approximately 11:05 a.m.

III. Council Consideration of Pending Applications

IV. Tour of Intramural Labs in Porter Neuroscience Center ...................... Dr. Griffith & Staff

The John Edward Porter Neuroscience Center (PNC) is one of the newest research buildings on the NIH campus, and its opening in 2014 allowed NIDCD’s intramural researchers to move their laboratories onto the NIH campus. Council previously toured the PNC in September 2018 and asked that if possible, we do it again. We wanted to take advantage of today’s meeting location to provide another tour and allow a few different NIDCD investigators the opportunity to highlight their research efforts.

Dr. Cooper called the members’ attention to the minutes of the January 25, 2019 meeting of the Advisory Council. The minutes were approved as written.

Confirmation of Dates for Future Council Meetings

Dates for the Council meetings through September 2021 have been established. A list of these meetings was distributed to the Council members and posted on the web site prior to this meeting. The next meeting of the Council is scheduled for Friday, September 13, 2019.

VI. Report on the NIDCD Budget ................................................................. Mr. Eric Williams

NIDCD’s Budget Officer, Mr. Eric Williams, presented information on the current and previous fiscal year budgets. He shared the NIDCD’s 2019 Budget Operating Plan as compared against the FY2018 final expenditures. The FY2019 budget benefits from a $15.5M increase.

Next, Mr. Williams shared the FY 2020 Budget Outlook, at this early and incomplete time. Both the House and Senate budget subcommittees had meetings this spring, but only the House has released their FY 2020 budget Mark-up. The House Mark-up is almost $90M more than the President’s proposed budget. The Senate had not issued their Mark-up for FY 2020.

[A copy of the slides Mr. Williams used for this budget presentation is included in Appendix 2]

VII. NIH Addresses Sexual Harassment in Biomedical Science ......................... Dr. Michael Lauer

Dr. Michael Lauer is the Deputy Director for Extramural Research at the National Institutes of Health (NIH). He serves as the principal scientific leader and advisor to the Director of the NIH on all matters relating to the substance, quality and effectiveness of the NIH extramural research program and administration. Today, Dr. Lauer updated the Council in a talk entitled, “NIH Addresses Sexual Harassment in Biomedical Science.”

Dr. Lauer reviewed the expectations for working environments and civil rights protections that accompany extramural grant awards. He also discussed related expectations that funded institutions must meet as part of their stewardship of NIH grants. Data was shared demonstrating the gender distribution in academic job categories and NIH grant applications/awards. He shared the aim to reach gender equity and to increase NIH’s role in addressing sexual harassment concerns.

In February, as part of a statement from NIH leadership on addressing sexual harassment in science, we encouraged the community to notify us about specific concerns by sending an email to GranteeHarassment@od.nih.gov. We received dozens of notifications through this channel and are taking each one seriously. We are working with the supported institutions to address these concerns and to assure that NIH-funded activities are conducted in a safe and harassment-free work environment. He reported that a number of institutions have instituted queries and numerous actions have been taken by those institutions.

As part of our continued efforts, NIH is developing a new webform that will allow anybody in the biomedical research community to share information related to a potential case of sexual harassment directly and, if desired, anonymously, to NIH. The establishment of this webform, in tandem with other actions, is taken as part of our continuing commitment to address the underlying culture that enables sexual harassment to take place. For additional information and resources, please see NIH’s Anti-Sexual Harassment website.
We appreciate hearing from all those affected by this issue. NIH can and will follow up on all concerns related to NIH-funded research submitted through this resource. We also strongly encourage individuals to report allegations of sexual harassment or assault to the appropriate authorities, which may include local police department and/or organization/institution equal employment opportunity or human resources offices.

VIII. Report of the Division of Scientific Programs.................................................. Dr. Cooper

Dr. Cooper introduced Dr. Amy Poremba to update the Council regarding recent BRAIN Initiative programs.

The BRAIN Initiative® (BI) is a trans-NIH program, established in 2013, that will have provided roughly $5 Billion dollars in neuroscience funding over 10 years. BRAIN is an acronym for Brain Research Through Advancing Innovative Technologies®. This talk encompasses some of the highlights of the past five years of funding outcomes generally, as well as those pertaining particularly to NIDCD mission areas, the structure of the BI administration, and highlights of research being performed by some NIDCD investigators who are also supported by the BI.

The BI has created an exciting increase in tools that are helping to accelerate discoveries and building a foundation we need to reduce the burden of brain disorders. This initiative has brought about a new culture, bridging neuroscientists, physicists, engineers, biologists, chemists, to name a few, and promotes team science. More than 700 investigators are now supported by the BI starting with 58 awards in 2014, to 205 in 2018. In the first year, just four BI grants awarded related in some way to our NIDCD mission areas, and last year in 2018 that number had grown to 27. In 2018, 27.8 million BI dollars out of 400 million, about 7% of the total BRAIN budget for that year supported NIDCD related research including creation of a fast speech decoder, tinnitus research, and 8th nerve stimulation studies. Overall, NIDCD mission goals are benefitting from BI funding, with room for growth in the upcoming next five years of funding.

IX. BRAIN Initiative: The Next Five Years.........................................................Dr. Christoph Schreiner

Dr. Christoph Schreiner is Professor and Vice Chairman in the Department of Otolaryngology – Head and Neck Surgery at the University of California, San Francisco. You all know him as a fellow Council member. For much of his time on Council, Christoph has also represented us on the NIH’s BRAIN Multi-Council Working Group. He is here to share how the BRAIN Initiative® will continue during the next 5 years.

Dr. Schreiner recapped the BRAIN Initiative® (BI) goals, accomplishments, and funding since it began in 2014 and linked that progress back to the “Brain 2025: A Scientific Vision” report from 2014. That report, BRAIN 2025, noted that the Initiative must adapt in response to the evolving scientific landscape. In light of rapid scientific progress, NIH formed a new ACD BRAIN Initiative Working Group 2.0 to help steer the second half of the initiative. That body was charged with reviewing progress, suggesting tune-ups based on evolving scientific landscape, identify new opportunities for research and technology, and to consider opportunities to train, empower and diversify the broader neuroscience research community. He then discussed the suggested short-term and long-term goals for BRAIN 2.0, with a focus on two areas, Discovering Diversity and Advancing Human Neuroscience.

Dr. Schreiner also shared information about the Neuroethics Guiding Principles being developed/discussed for the BRAIN Initiative, published in the Journal of Neuroscience, December 2018. The main questions being raised in this area are:

1. What is the potential impact of a model or neuroscientific account of disease on individuals, communities, and society?
2. What are the ethical standards of biological material and data collection and how do local standards compare to those of global collaborators?
3. What is the moral significance of neural systems that are under development in neuroscience research laboratories?
4. How could brain interventions impact or reduce autonomy?
5. In which contexts might a neuroscientific technology/innovation be used or deployed?

Both the Brain 2.0 directions and the Neuroethics Guiding Principles documents have been available for public comment and those comment periods are closing soon. Both reports will then be shared with the ACD members at their June meeting.

When considering the past BI accomplishments and the pending changes to the initiative, Dr. Schreiner closed his presentation by raising a few upcoming challenges for NIDCD to consider.

1. How to disseminate and support latest technological advances for its investigators?
2. How to encourage equitable collaborations between technique-focused and concept-focused investigators?
3. How to balance the Institute’s emphasis on innovative technologies with concept-driven approaches that have perhaps less innovative technologies?
4. How to encourage and even require a more unified approach to informatics infrastructure?
